

M+B

10 In-Demand Works on Artsy This Week

Written by Beatrice Sapsford
June 23, 2020

In this weekly series, Artsy's Curatorial team offers a look at the artworks that are currently gaining traction among collectors on Artsy. Looking at our internal data, we offer a selection of works that Artsy members are engaging with through inquiries, bids, page views, and saves. Ranging from large paintings by rising young talents to works on paper by established artists, the following pieces are culled from recent online auctions and art fairs hosted on Artsy, as well as exhibitions and works added by our gallery partners.

Kara Joslyn, Midnight in a Perfect World (2019)

Kara Joslyn pushes the boundaries of figuration by incorporating uncommon materials such as car paint and polymer into her work. This painting was another standout in The Hole's Black Lives Matter fundraiser on Artsy. As Alina Cohen wrote in Artsy Editorial last year, Joslyn's work "creates dimensionality while referencing sculpture, photography, craft and art history—all on a single canvas." The artist is represented by M+B Gallery in Los Angeles.

Midnight in a Perfect World, 2019